

ALUMNAE PUT ON GREEK PLAY SOON

Graduates of Villa de Chantal Arrange Drama at Illinois Theatre for May 29.

DESIGNERS AND JUNIORS TO ASSIST

"Didi, the Phoenician Queen" Will Be Given With An Elaborate Setting.

Alumnae of Villa de Chantal have undertaken the most elaborate entertainment ever given by this institution in the selection of a Greek play to be presented at the Illinois theatre on the evening of May 29. They will be assisted by the seniors and juniors and each pupil at the villa will be given a part to play, making a cast of large proportions. Lucile Cook, co-director, well known teacher of expression and dramatic art, is coaching the players and a cast has been selected according to the requirements of the play that will reflect credit upon the producer and the alumnae.

"Didi, the Phoenician Queen" is the title of the play which has been chosen for presentation, a Greek play, dramatized from Vergil and translated with remarkable beauty and fidelity by Frank J. Miller. It was given at the University of Chicago last year and scored a big success. Mrs. Canterbury and others who have seen the work predict a finished performance and one of great artistic merit. The play calls for elaborate costumes, including Greek lines and will be beautifully staged. Color illumination will be thrown on the dances and choruses making a pretty effect. The music is adapted from Chopin, principally. The choruses will be numerous. The arrangements are outlined giving promise of a splendid production.

Miss Dorothy Simpson has in training a body of young women for the Greek dances. She is designing original costumes for these dances and their artistic possibilities are certain to be brought to full completion under her direction. Some exquisite solo dances as well have been planned.

The story of the drama centers upon the defeat of the Trojan army which has been overcome by the Greeks and is shipwrecked upon the Carthaginian shore. Didi, the Phoenician queen welcomes and succors them only to fall in love with the Prince of Troy, leader of the exiles. Everything is progressing in harmony in their romantic love affair when the god Jupiter, overcome with jealousy, sends Mercury to Aeneas to implant within his breast the seeds of discontent and fire him with false hopes to go to Rome leaving the queen. Overcome with grief and hopelessness of ever again seeing her beloved Aeneas, the queen gives way to despair and ends her unhappy existence, to the immortal anguish of the prince.

The drama has immense possibilities and the young women are working indefatigably to make a success of it. Rehearsals are occurring nightly and Mrs. Canterbury believes she has a revelation for the people of the tri-city in the wealth of histrionic talent at her command. Not a detail is to be omitted. The soft Greek drapery will be especially becoming to these graceful young women. All of the cast have important parts, the leading characters being Didi, and Aeneas.

Patronesses Named. A list of patronesses has been secured and the villa organizations are assisting the alumnae. A production commensurate with the high standard hitherto maintained by the villa is assured. The cast is not yet complete but the principal characters are here given:
